Free Trade.

Reciprocity has done great things for the Hawaiian Islands, whereof many have been made glad, and some have been made richer than before. The sugar capacities of the Islands are to be tested to the fullest extent. They have already exhibited an ability to yield that is quite-encouraging. San Francisco capitalists have naturally taken an unusual interest in the productive resources of the Islands since the operation of the treaty. sources of the Islands since the operation of the treaty. The Islands furnished us with a large portion of our supply of raw sugar last year, and this year's imports will be still larger. In the course of three years it is probable that all the raw sugar needed by our refiners will be obtained from that source. The trade has brought into service quite a number of vessels. A few years ago the Comet, D. C. Murray, and two or three other results, were all that were heceasary between San Francisco and Homeinto. Now we are regularly employ. Francisco and Honeiulu. Now we are regularly employ-ing from fifteen to twenty, in addition to a monthly line of steamers. We think it quite probable that the route will soon be covered by a direct and independent line. It has been runnered that the steamer Gussie Telfair, now in the Coca Bay Coal trade, would inaugurate such an enterprise. There certainly ought to be a line of this character established right away. In the event of a cable between Ban Francisco and Vokohama, Homolulu would probably be attached to the service. A good feature of the commerce between California and the Hawaiian Islands is that the vessels employed carry full car-goes both ways. While we take all the sugar and rice the Hawaiians have to spare, we pay largely for the same in manufactures and produce. This is a healthful kind of trade, because it is reciprocal. Very little money is needed in the settlement of business either way, growth of our export trade with the Hawaiian Isl nay be seen in the following record from the San Fran co Custom House for the past decade:

Total for ten years ... Since the adoption of the reciprocity treaty the volume of trade, has doubled. Some of the value for the past of trade has doubled. Some of the value for the past two years has been for machinery, which may not be duplicated this year or next. The regular demand for articles of consumption has been greatly increased, because there are more consumers at the Islands than formerly. In addition to this direct trade there is a large export trade with the Hawaiian Islands on the part of Oregon and Washington Territory. Most of the lumber used is obtained direct from the mills at Puget Sound .- S. F. Bullstin

THE PACIFIC

SATURDAY, APRIL 17.

A somewhat pronounced article on the subject of the decline of the Hawaiian race appears in the Gazette of this week, wherein the view is emphatically expressed that the great preponderthe people is "the general sexual license that prevails." And the result of this is declared to be "a universal propagation of syphilis," of which "multitudes die of the immediate disease." and " the rest are enfeebled and with impaired constitutions succumb to lung diseases and other maladies." This is a very sweeping declaration and presents a sad picture of the moral and physical condition of the Hawaiian people. If the statement and the picture were true andifair, they would afford a humiliating comment upon over fifty years of Christian missionary teaching, preaching and example upon this nation. But a lengthy and somewhat familiar acquaintance with the Hawaiian race warrants us in saying that the statement is untrue and the picture sadly overdrawn and overcolored. It is a gross exaggeration based upon mere assertion, and a mischievous libel, to declare that sexual license prevails among this people, in the sense conveyed by the words used. It is easy enough, when the wish is father to the thought, to make these wholesale charges, but it will be far from easy to substantiate them. It is quite true that the standard as to morals and outside respectability among the ignorant poor of this people is lower than among the same class in the enlightened nations of Europe and America; and under all the circumstances of the recent emergence of the former from barbarism and ancient feudal restraint, and of their intercourse with contaminating visitors from those same enlightened countries-it would indeed be strange if it were otherwise. But so far from it being true that there is a "prevailing sexual license" among all the people-an expression which bears tice Harris presiding: the construction that Hawaii is a modern Sodom, where female virtue is almost unknown-we assert without the fear of contradiction, that the pure native race can show a goodly proportion of christian families, wherein female virtue and chastity are prized and bonored, and are something more than a mere name. The facts are and Brown for defendant. within the reach of even the writer of the article Nahalepaakai w. vs. Kaailomea, Administrator under review-if, indeed, it will serve his purpose of the estate of D Kukabiko, deceased-Appeal to seek for them. If he is an unprejudiced as well as a pure minded person, we assure him, from personal experience, that he may travel alone from one end of the Islands to the other without discovering the prevalence of that " sexual license " with the guilt and disgrace of which he so recklessly charges the whole nation. To the prurient and libidinous indeed, all things are unclean, and the presence of an angel even would suggest impure thoughts in such a mind. But evil to him who evil thinks. Again, it is true that the seeds of a fearful disease-the curse of the human race from early antiquity-were sown among the Hawaiians at first by the strangers whom they so generously and hospitably entertained,-the discoverers and subsequent voyagers,-and to a considerable extent the disease in its secondary and tertiary forms is spread and diffused in the blood of the people. Precisely as the intelligent observer may see the evidences of the same blood taint in many a high-toned " foreigner. But it is not true, as declared by the Gazette's writer, that syphilis is universally propagated among the Hawaiians, nor that at the present day " multitudes die of the immediate disease." If, instead of thus giving free rein to his heated imagination the writer had made inquiries of the medical men in the country as to the real facts, he would have learned that there are at the present time far fewer cases met with here of " the immediate disease" than in former years. And he might also have learned that the advanced medical science of to-day is able successfully to combat this dreadful disease, tively powerless. been one of the causes of the diminution of the | E. Bond, and burdened with grave charges against people " during the life time of the first Kame- the official conduct, as well as the private character, hameha." But it is not stated further, as might of the Sheriff of this district, in which Mr. Bond have been with truth and pertinency, that the takes occasion to denounce him as a common drunkenforcement since that time of the penal laws ard, notorious as a frequenter of Chinese establishagainst illicit sexual intercourse, so construed as ments where gin is known to be illicitly sold; and FORBUILDING PURPOSES. to rigorously punish the woman found with child lying there drunk for days together. In the name outside of matrimony, had served to largely keep up the practice of child murder and feeticide, until a comparatively recent period, when the law was repealed or modified.

There is also another among the many causes of the diminution of this people, which has been overlooked by most writers who have undertaken to discuss the subject, -and for the obvious reason that their knowledge of the actual life of the Hawaiians is merely superficial. We allude to the facts that, with the introduction of new and strange diseases, together with changed conditions of living and diet; the disappearance of the ancient Kahuna or doctor with his herb-cures : the little or no knowledge existing among the people of hygiene or sanitary rules; it is under these circumstances that multitudes of those who are attacked with perfectly curable ailments, especially among the ignorant poor, actually die from the lack of proper care and nursing-simply this and nothing more. A good deal has been done in this regard of late years in Honolulu by a society of benevolent native ladies known as the Hoola Lahui ;" but there is an ample field for noble work throughout the nation for a considerable force of those true christian beroines, the Sisters of Charity. And there is still another cause underlying the decadence of the Hawaiians, which, though unrecognized by those who have not been familiar with the history of the race, is yet a potent one. It is the abolition of the feudal system and the hasty substitution of free government, free suffrage and the gift of land ownership. This theory may sound strangely to some, but it is a true one in the case of the Hawaiians. We may revert to this subject more fully, when our space A work in the Hawaiian language on Sanitary Instruction is now in the press and will shortly be issued. It has been written and compiled by the Hon. W. M. Gibson, who was chairman of a Special Committee of the last Legislature, appointed for the purpose. It is confidently ex-pected that the work will prove useful in direc:ing attention to the importance of regarding the laws of health, and also be of value in dispelling much of the prevailing ignorance as to the proper care and management of the sick.

The Labor Market of Western Polynesia.

It is very probable, as was intimated in our last. that the next expedition sent out for immigrants by the Board will be to the Islands of Western Polynesia, comprising the large and populous groups known as the Solomon Islands and the New Hebrides. It is estimated that these two groups ontain a population of from two to three hundred thousand. From thence is derived the most of the labor employed on the plantations of Fiji, Queensland and Samoa, and the people, doubtless ceived (the business being closely supervised by ceived (the business being closely supervised by Government) are represented as all more or less eager to emigrate. The inhabitants of both groups. and more especially those of the Solomon Islands. are a robust and strong race. (the formation of the country being high land) both men and women are industrious and tractable, and apt to learn quickly. The planters who have tried both these copie and those from the low coral islands-like the people of Micronesia that have recently been brought here-very decidedly give the preference o the former, for the reasons that they are more robust and active, and suffer less from change of habits and diet than the latter.

The New Hebrides lie between lat. 13.36 S., ong. 166.40 E., and lat. 20.15 S., long. 170.11 E. ating cause of the diminution of the numbers of There are twenty-three principal Islands, but the group contains over one hundred, and occupies an area 419 miles North and South by 211 miles East and West. The inhabitants are represented by our informant-a gentleman who has trequently visited the islands of both this and the Solomon oup during the past ten years-to be simply debased heathen and savages. Cannibalism still exists among them. They are treacherous in the ex- At HORN'S STEAM CANDY FACTORY. treme, and those who venture to their shores to trade must go well armed. And yet, strange as it may seem, we are told that after these same savages get on board ship their manner, and in fact heir whole nature seems to undergo a complete change. They are willing and active and will readily do anything they are required to do-show them what is wanted and they are happy to obey. And the united testimony of the planters who have employed them for years is in effect the same as to their industry and tractableness. The Solomon group, which is said to be the largest in the Pacific, lies a few degrees to the North and West of the New Hebrides. Like the inhabitants of the latter group, they are a branch of the Papuan race, with a mixture of the Malayo-Polynesian. Both men and women are said to be even stronger and more robust than those of the New Hebrides. The men are healthy, coarse looking ellows and the women are good looking, with occasionally a really handsome one. The people are characterized as industrious, and easily managed, and quite ready to emigrate. These islands exend about 496 miles North and South by 464 miles East and West, and sustain a large population. From all that we have been able to gather from authentic sources, we are inclined to believe that the two groups herein mentioned will afford a good field from which to obtain a supply not only of labor, but of men and women that by coming noder the influence of our civilization will amalgamate with and become a part of the Hawaiian nation. The women of the Solomon group in particular, who have married in Fiji, are said to make good wives and become the mothers of numerous Supreme Court Calendar, April Term, 1880.

During a residence of one year in the district, excepting from the pen of Mr. Bond, I have neither heard nor read, of anything in the conduct of the Sheriff that would substantiate the declaration referred to. I have been in a position during my residence here to make it probable that if the facts in regard to the Sheriff's drunken habits, as asserted it is scarcely more probable that a Gospel preacher, the best part of whose life has been ostensibly devoted to the advancement of Christianity among a benighted people, should willfully libel the character of an innocent person, than that with the best of opportunities for obtaining information, I should still be in error. The issue involved is a grave one, e. i., either that the Government is criminally neglectful in sustaining in office an individual whose conduct and example are conducive to the encouragement of crime: or, that a Gospel Minister, well known throughout the Islands, and whose life and conduct have been the subject of published encomiums, has been guilty of

The gravity of such issues should not fail in a Government, not literally dead, to call forth a thorough and impartial inquiry by a competent Commission into the facts of the case, as, to know the truth is due to the community. Fiat justicia ruat calum.
